

Electronic Mail

The use of E-Mail is a privilege which may be revoked at any time for abusive conduct. The following type of information or software cannot be placed on any University owned technology system:

1. that which infringes upon the rights of another person;
2. that which may injure someone else and/or lead to prosecution for violation of law (examples of these are: pirated software, destructive software, or pornographic materials);
3. that which consists of any advertisements for commercial enterprises. It is a violation of the Federal Postal Lottery Statute to send chain letters through electronic messaging which request sending money or something of value through the US mail.

Electronic forums such as distribution lists and newsgroups have expectations regarding subject area and etiquette for postings. Members of the Millersville University community should be considerate of the expectations and sensitivities of others.

Network Use

All users of the computing/information network facilities must act responsibly and maintain the integrity of these resources. The University reserves the right to limit, restrict, or extend computing/information network privileges and access to its resources. Deliberate acts which are wasteful of computing/information network resources or which unfairly monopolize resources to the exclusion of others are prohibited. These acts include, but are not limited to, sending mass mailings or chain letters, creating unnecessary multiple jobs or processes, obtaining
