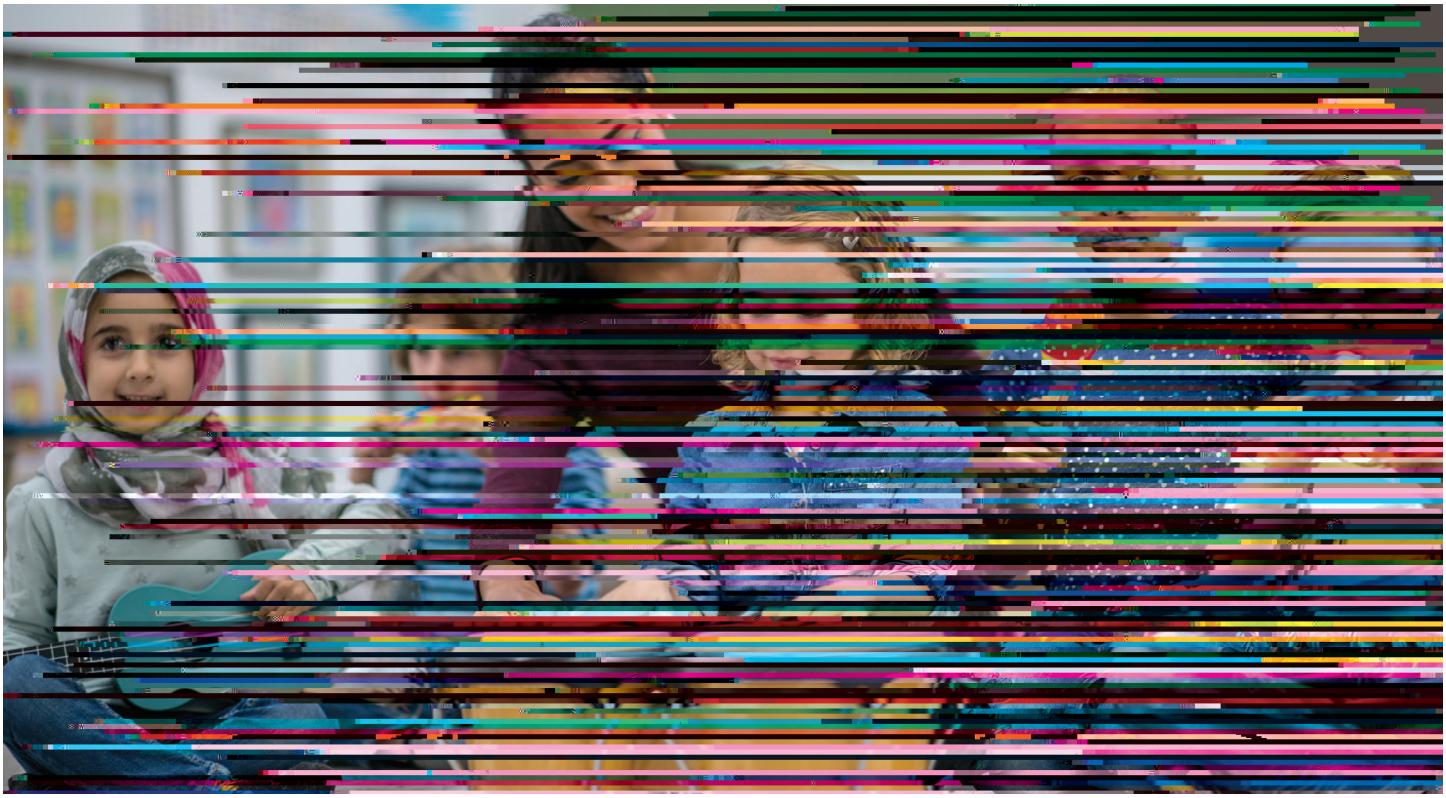
Master of Education in Special Education



The graduate-level special education program at Millersville University equips education professionals to create empowered and unified learning communities for learners of all ages and abilities.

Our goal is to equip educators to nurture a strong and inclusive PK-12 learning environment where every individual can thrive in today's diverse society, fostering respect, collaboration, mutual understanding and the development of each person's unique talents while upholding fundamental human rights. The principles instilled during your undergraduate studies will be further honed and put into action as you embody respect, collaboration, mutual understanding, the celebration of individual abilities and a commitment to human rights. Each program is tailored to empower busy education professionals with the specialized expertise required to meet and exceed the diverse needs of students with disabilities across various K-12 settings.
